Pass sanitaire : Elisabeth Borne entretient le flou juridique sur la possibilité de licencier

Article réservé aux abonnés

La pandémie de Covid-19 en France dossier ▾

Deux jours après que le Sénat a retiré du projet de loi la possibilité de voir les employés être licenciés pour défaut de pass sanitaire, la ministre du Travail est revenue à la charge ce mardi matin en s'appuyant sur le droit commun. Sans convaincre.

CORONAWET De Raad van State aanvaardt dat één minister maatregelen neemt die onze grondwettelijke vrijheden en rechten drastisch beperken. Onverantwoord, vinden 25 grondwetsspecialisten. Ze luiden de alarmbel.

Het coronavirus houdt België stevig in zijn greep. Het stelt de overheid voor een verpletterende verantwoordelijkheid. Ze heeft de plicht om de volksgezondheid te beschermen, maar dat gaat gepaard met enorme economische en sociale kosten. In zo'n situatie past het de overheid enig krediet te geven. Het is gemakkelijk kritiek te geven als je zelf niet aan het roer staat.

Toch moeten we het hebben over de manier waarop wordt opgetreden. Juist nu heeft de overheid nood aan advies. Ze heeft zich daarvoor omringd met virologen en andere experten. Dat is verstandig. Jammer genoeg springt ze minder zorgvuldig om met de grondwet. De meest drastische inperkingen op onze grondrechten – isolatiemaatregelen, een avondklok en lockdown – steunen op een eenvoudig ministerieel besluit, ondertekend door één minister, en zonder voorafgaand juridisch advies.

Grondwetsspecialisten zijn het erover eens: die werkwijze is in strijd met de grondwet. De grondwet wil dat het parlement zelf beslist over ingrijpende beperkingen op grondrechten. De wetgeving waarop de regering zich beroept, was helemaal niet bedoeld voor de langdurige en drastische inperkingen die we nu kennen. Sowieso mag de wetgever zo'n verantwoordelijkheid niet geven aan een enkele minister. Toch blijft de regering koppig verdergaan met het ministerieel besluit.

Zachte heelmeeesters

De regering zal misschien zeggen dat de maatregelen niet echt door een enkele minister worden genomen, maar politiek veel ruimer gedragen zijn. Juridisch overtuigt dat niet. Bovendien ontbreekt de cruciale stem van het parlement. Het parlement moet het heft hierover in eigen handen nemen en een coronawet goedkeuren die de regering een duidelijk kader biedt. Dit gaat om een wezenlijk aspect van onze democratie: dat beperkingen van onze rechten en vrijheden worden besproken en afgewogen in een open en publiek parlementair debat. Het geeft de moeilijke beslissingen een breder draagvlak. En het maakt de positie

Sortez le Parlement de la quarantaine !

Selon le Conseil d'Etat, le ministre de l'Intérieur peut adopter, sur la base de la législation en vigueur, des mesures qui restreignent nos libertés et nos droits constitutionnels, considérablement. Vingt-cinq spécialistes du droit constitutionnel tirent la sonnette d'alarme.

La pandémie de covid tient la Belgique en étau. Elle impose à notre gouvernement une responsabilité écrasante. Il a l'obligation de protéger la santé publique. Mais cette obligation implique un coût économique et social énorme. La complexité d'une telle situation est à porter à son crédit. La critique est facile lorsqu'on n'est pas aux commandes.

Pourtant, nous devons discuter de la manière dont le gouvernement intervient. En ce moment précis, il a besoin de conseils. A cette fin, il s'est entouré de prendre l'initiative et adopter une loi corona qui fixe un cadre clair et adapté au gouvernement. Il en va d'un aspect es-

Right to life :

Legal basis

Article 2, § 1, of the European Convention on Human Rights :

“Everyone’s right to life shall be protected by law. No one shall be deprived of his life intentionally save in the execution of a sentence of a court following his conviction of a crime for which this penalty is provided by law.”

Negative obligation :

authorities cannot deliberately cause deaths.

Positive obligation :

authorities have to take reasonable steps to avoid foreseeable deaths.

Scope of the positive obligation to protect life :
summary

When

(1) States know (or ought to have known)... that

(2) there is a real and immediate risk to life...

They have to take measures which, judged reasonably, might have been expected to avoid that risk.

Scope of the positive
obligation to protect life :
typical examples

Öneryildiz v. Turkey
(30 November 2004)

Budayeva v. Russia

It is however a limited obligation to act :

some risks are acceptable because,

(1) States have a limited material capacity :
a zero-risk society would be too expensive.

(2) States have a limited legal capacity :
a zero-risk society would hurt other human rights.

Scope of the

The obligation to protect life « should not be unduly impaired by paternalistic interpretations, bearing in mind that the notion of personal autonomy is an important principle underlying the Convention guarantees ».

« The Court has observed that the ability to conduct one's life [...] may also include the opportunity to pursue activities perceived to be of a physically or morally harmful or dangerous nature for the individual concerned, and improper State interference with this freedom of personal choice may give rise to an issue under the Convention ».

Possibility of limiting the exercise of a human right

When authorities limit the exercise of a human right, they do not necessarily violate this right.

Article 9 of the E.C.H.R. :

1. Everyone has the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion; [...]
2.
